Ice/snow/sailing.....midnight sun stuff. I also read his Down the Danube book. Not quite Riddle of the Sands or Round The World Under Sail, but very gutsy in hard to find knowledge of ICE/SEA adventure. 0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Wonderful sailing adventure By jmh I am not familiar with the author, I don't sail and I admit that the technical aspects were over my head but this book was beautiful. I loved it. It was funny and emotional and I do not care if it was fact or fiction. It was great and I recommend this book highly! 0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. I love this and all the books by Tristan Jones. By Paul C. Quistgard I love this and all the books by Tristan Jones. He reminds me of a slightly horny and somewhat grumpy old guy with a vast lifetime experience of single handed sailing in some of the most remote and trying locales on our planet. Great read.

When Tristan Jones, who became one of the best-known small boat sailors and writers of our times, was discharged from the Navy, and told he was physically unfit for more seagoing, he got hold of a small craft, Creswell, which he converted to a cruising ketch, and started sailing. Then, determined to sail farther north than anyone else, Jones set out from Iceland, accompanied only by Nelson, the one-eyed, three-legged dog he had inherited. Jones spent two winters full of continuous suspense and danger in this bleak polar region. He was trapped by violent snowstorms, attacked by a ravenous polar bear, and marooned on an ice pack in the Arctic Ocean, all the while grappling with loneliness and despair, plus dwindling supplies. Finally, when the ice shifted, crushing Creswell like a matchbox, Jones had to deal with possible death!

Ice! is to the wide waters of the world what the exploits of that other Jones chap, Indiana, is to the wide screen ...only for real (Sports Illustrated) Tristan Jones is one of the true classic sailing writers of our time. This story tells of a voyage with a three-legged dog into the frozen north where he is trapped by numerous storms. This is a true classic a tale based on the real life adventures of a true sailing great. Fast paced and as exciting as it is informative. (Latitudes Attitudes) Another magnificent tale of derring-do from the indomitable Welsh adventurer. (Yachting World) From the Publisher 7 1.5-hour cassettes About the Author Tristan Jones is one of the best-known authors of sailing stories writing today.
