Located in the heartland of Union County, New Berlin was considered a cultural, educational, and governmental center for craftsmen, farmers, and tradesmen. The county seat from 1813 to 1855, New Berlin was the gateway to the Buffalo Valley. Located in an area rich in natural resources, New Berlin is bounded by Penns Creek and Shamokin Mountain. The creek was a busy waterway that was used to transport goods, while Shamokin Mountain is known for being rich with iron ore and timber. New Berlin and the Buffalo Valley highlights what life was like in New Berlin and the surrounding communities of Dry Valley, White Springs, Vicksburg, Buffalo Crossroads, Mazeppa, Cowan, Red Bank, Rand, and Forest Hill, the latter a gateway to lush woodlands and clear streams.

About the Author Jeannette Lasansky, current president of the Union County Historical Society, has authored over two dozen books and articles on Pennsylvania's history and material culture, including Images of America: Union County River Towns. In her new book, New Berlin and the Buffalo Valley, she presents the region's history using the extensive photographic resources of the Union County Historical Society, the New Berlin Heritage Association, and many private collections.
