Expert perspectives on global surf culture circa 1989 By David Ciaffardini This is a high-quality coffee-table size compendium of all kinds of surfing lore, facts, biographies, global surf spot break-downs, and loads of photos. Esteemed surfing journalist Nick Carroll rounded up a boatload of surfing experts to contribute chapters coinciding with their individual expertise. Thus we have the late big wave surfing star Mark Foo covering Waimea Bay, Wayne "Rabbit" Barholomew giving us the low-down on Burleigh Heads Australia, Tom Carroll explaining the barrels of G-Land, Derek Hynd giving his viewpoint on contest surfing, Leonard Lueras excavating surfing's ancient history, etc., etc. First published in 1991, The Next Wave, gives a good world-wide overview of what it meant to be a surfer at the end of the 1980s (which accounts for a fair number of featured surfers sporting day-glo surf trunks and board graphics.) . Includes a glossary, index and a list of men and women's surfing world champions from 1964 to 1989. The First Edition's dustjacket cover photo of Alan Sarlo cranking a full, on-rail, fin-release bottom turn at the base of a monstrous, heaving Todos Santos barrel is way cool, but was, unfortunately, replaced with a less-stoking image on the later edition of this book, which is essentially the same book, but with a different dustjacket. 0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. giving thanks to nickBy A Customer I have Jaws and Surfrider and I think they are the most amazing books I have ever read. I learned a lot about big wave riders that I never knew before. They have a whole different mentality than what I believed them to have. Thanks for putting out such a great book for people like me, who don't like reading, but will make an exception for the exciting ones like yours! (I just have one complaint, where are all the WOMEN?!) -KATIE SANDERS ('webcong@gte.com') CA, USA
