From Macmillan : The Statesman's Yearbook World Gazetteer before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised The Statesman's Yearbook World Gazetteer:

The fully revised fourth edition of The Statesman's Yearbook World Gazetteer is a valuable companion to The Stateman's Yearbook and an extremely useful publication in its own right, containing over 400,000 words and over 8,000 entries. In addition, there is a section giving precise definitions of over 700 geographical terms. The Gazetteer runs from Aabenraa in Denmark to Zwolle in the Netherlands and provides details of every place which is of world importance because of its size, history, or economic activity.

About the Author John Paxton is the author of many books on the European Communities including "The Developing Common Market "and "A Dictionary of the European Communities. "He was the editor of "The Statesman's Year-Book "from 1969 to 1990.
